Braille door plates for the blind are special markings placed on doors that enable blind and visually impaired people to identify rooms. These signs usually contain information in Braille and in the local language, allowing users to read the room name, room number or other text relevant to them.

Braille Door Signs for the Blind are extremely important in public places such as schools, hospitals, offices and government institutions as they help blind and visually impaired people find rooms more easily and avoid confusion. Many countries have laws requiring Braille to be placed on doors in public places to ensure accessibility for all people, regardless of their visual ability.
